

Does Stop, Question, and Frisk Reduce Crime? Results from New Research

February 18, 2014
New Building 9.64

- 10:00 – 10:30 Coffee and Registration
- 10:30 – 11:15 Introduction and Opening Remarks
Jeremy Travis, President of John Jay College
James Lynch, University of Maryland
Karen Terry, John Jay College
- 11:15 – 12:00 Examining the impact of stop, question, and frisk on crime rates at the census tract level
Richard Rosenfeld, University of Missouri – St. Louis
Robert Fornango, F1 Analytics
- 12:00 – 1:00 Lunch
- 1:00 – 1:45 Examining the impact of stop, question, and frisk on crime rates at the street segment level
David Weisburd, George Mason University and The Hebrew University
Alese Wooditch, George Mason University
Sarit Weisburd, The University of Washington, Seattle
Sue-Ming Yang, National Chung Cheng University in Taiwan
Brian Lawton, George Mason University
- 1:45 – 3:00 Discussants
Robert Apel, Rutgers University
Tanya Coke, John Jay College, City University of New York
Delores Jones Brown, John Jay College, City University of New York
Steve Messner, University at Albany
Tom Tyler, Yale University
- 3:00 – 3:15 Break
- 3:15 – 4:15 Reply to Discussants and Open Discussion
- 4:30 – 6:30 Reception – President's Suite