Just Policing?
Matt Westgate, Jonathan Samaroo
Gender, Activism and Social Change, GEN 140, FYS 07/08, Professor Mills

Project Description
This project was chosen based on the fact that we want to pursue a career in policing. We also want to know what will happen if communities start to use Just Policing and the effects that it will have on the community.

Research Question:
What is Just Policing and how can this new initiative help to prevent wars and lower crime rates?

Just Policing Protects Citizens
- Recent studies have shown that in the past ten years, Just policing has prevented terrorist plots in the United States.
- It can prevent wars and mass killings of innocent people.
- Just Policing would draw upon international law to pursue criminals, which would decrease casualties.
- The more police we have, the fewer crimes will be committed. This is shown in studies done by multiple researchers.

Just Policing Builds Community
- Foot patrols by police officers have prevented crimes. More patrols done by police in “hot areas” have helped in lowering crime rates and attempted crimes.
- Just Policing involves decision-making processes that are more open than traditional policing. If the community is to be a full partner, the department needs mechanisms for readily sharing relevant information on crime and social disorder problems and police operations with the community.

Conclusion
With Just Policing, crime rates and wars (civil and between nations) will be decreased. Just Policing brings communities together and has them involved in everything that is going on in their area. It will help prevent terrorist plots and wars by bringing people together to help stop it. Also, with the police being more actively involved, they will be able to see what is happening in the area they are patrolling, and this will help decrease crime rates.

Hypothesis
If any community uses Just Policing, they can decrease the crime rate in their area. It can also help on a wider scale by having states or nations use this type of policing to prevent wars (civil or between countries).

Just Policing referenced from: