Care and Coercion? Surveillance and Oversight in the Modern Nation-State

Speaker: Vincenzo A. Sainato

John Jay College of Criminal Justice
Department of Public Management
Doctoral Program in Criminal Justice

Globally, there is a manifest absence of agreed-upon formal standards relating to privacy and autonomy among liberal democratic states; moreover, problems have also arisen within individual states regarding governance and the use of surveillance technologies and applications. This presentation will discuss ongoing research in this area being conducted at John Jay. Several themes will be discussed including comparing the means of data collection (such as national identity systems) and their impact(s) on the rights of citizens in nations around the world along with the legal regimes for protecting these rights. Special emphasis will be given new concepts and innovative tools for governance and prevention of abuses... rather than response mechanisms to reported bad acts.
