The fall course preview is an opportunity for students to learn about the offerings of the English Department and the content of each class. With the help of English Matters, a newsletter, we can get a sneak peek at what is to come. The newsletter, which is released quarterly, offers insights into the teaching philosophy of each professor and the courses they will be teaching. It also features updates on upcoming events such as the English Major Advising Parties and the department's administrative coordinator's office hours. The newsletter is a valuable resource for students looking to explore the possibilities within the English Department.

So, what are we looking forward to this fall? The fall course preview begins with a discussion of our new course offerings. We will be offering a variety of courses, including literature, writing, and film. Students will have the opportunity to explore different genres and periods, from classical literature to contemporary fiction. Here are just a few of the courses that we will be offering:

- LIT 260.03: Introduction to Literary Study
- LIT 298: Comic Books and Graphic Novels
- LIT 300.01: Text and Context
- LIT 309.02: Contemporary Fiction
- LIT 373: Topics in 17th and 18th Century British Literature
- LIT 374: Topics in Modern and Contemporary American Literature
- LIT 375: Topics in World Literature

In addition to these core courses, we will be offering a range of elective courses that allow students to explore their interests further. These courses will cover topics such as feminist theory, postcolonialism, and the impact of the Cold War on literature. Students will have the opportunity to take courses that reflect their personal interests and career goals.

The fall course preview is an exciting opportunity to learn about the rich and diverse offerings of the English Department. Whether you are a seasoned English major or just beginning your studies, there is something for everyone. So, get ready to explore the world of literature and the many possibilities that it offers.
