

INSPIRED TO GIVE

John Jay College Campaign for the Future of Justice

JULES AND LYNN KROLL LEAD BY EXAMPLE

Jules Kroll, chairman of the John Jay College Foundation Board of Trustees, has a long and well established track record as a pioneer in such fields as private investigations, risk management and bond rating. Now he has shown himself to be every bit the trailblazer with respect to John Jay's fundraising campaign, with a $2-million leadership gift that will help support the College's Honors Program for talented, highly motivated students.

The College saluted the gift from Kroll and his wife, Lynn, by naming the soaring, light-filled atrium that anchors the new building on West 59th Street in their honor. The dedication on May 8 was part of a gala to formally launch the $50-million Campaign for the Future of Justice.

"Jules Kroll's long and distinguished career has been built on trailblazing leadership, and he proves this once again with this generous gift to our campaign and our students," said President Jeremy Travis.

Kroll, who is chairman and chief executive of Kroll Bond Rating Agency Inc. and chairman and co-founder of K2 Intelligence, said in an interview with The Wall Street Journal that the gift was spurred in part by his interest in helping the minority population at John Jay, where nearly two-thirds of the 15,000 students are either Latino or African American. "I didn't feel that I had ever done enough for the minority community in my other work," said Kroll. "It makes you feel good to help with that."

Kroll said he hopes that the gift will "lead by example" and prompt others to do likewise.

"The inspiration for this is seeing the contribution that our graduates and faculty make," he said. "They really are on the front lines of educating and becoming practitioners in the area of justice."

The John Jay Honors Program is an innovative, theme-based program that brings students together to excel academically. They work closely with faculty and peers in an ongoing learning community, exploring the idea of the common good in a sequence of enriched, challenging, interdisciplinary courses that use New York City as a laboratory for learning. The program emphasizes critical thinking, creativity and ethical decision-making with attention to global concerns, community responsibility and civic engagement.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

The proud history and promising future of John Jay College of Criminal Justice owe much to our donors and benefactors, whose generosity and vision have combined in powerful ways to contribute to the College's ongoing success story.

It is here at John Jay that students are challenged, stimulated and engaged as they prepare to make a difference in the world. It is here that faculty members bring to bear the very best in teaching and scholarship in the course of addressing society's most pressing needs. And it is here that every gift makes a significant difference not only to our students but to those whose lives will be ultimately touched by our future "fierce advocates for justice." You have our profound gratitude.

Consider a few examples: the $5-million gift from proud alumnus Dr. Andrew Shiva (MS '97) and his wife, Anya, that will support students and faculty in our forensic psychology programs; the $200,000 in crucial planning and operational funding provided by the David Rockefeller Fund for the Prison-to-College Pipeline program; and the $2 million from John Jay College Foundation Chairman Jules Kroll and his wife, Lynn, to support the Honors Program for our brightest, most highly motivated students.

These are just three of the many contributions that provide us with valuable unrestricted funds for investment in the kinds of programs students expect from their college. These gifts also allow us to attract and retain extraordinary young faculty members who, while winning coveted prizes for their research, know the importance of teaching future leaders, scholars and heroes.

As John Jay looks ahead to 2014, when we will mark 50 years of Educating for Justice, nothing is more crucial to the future success of the College and its students than our donors' continued generous support of the ongoing $50-million Campaign for the Future of Justice. I am proud of and grateful for the commitment of all of our donors, who are helping to insure that John Jay's noble mission continues unimpeded, and that we maintain our preeminent position as an institution of higher learning, innovative research and cultural significance.

JAY WALK CONTRIBUTIONS PAVE THE WAY FOR SCHOLARSHIPS

Early last year, a standing-room-only crowd of John Jay College alumni, faculty and staff, students and friends gathered to celebrate the formal opening of the Jay Walk, the urban oasis that is one of the crown jewels of the College's new expanded campus.

With the event, the College thanked and reconnected with those who participated in the Jay Walk campaign with the purchase of inscribed bricks, benches and trees as a way of commemorating graduations and other milestones, honoring loved ones, or simply showing their gratitude toward John Jay.

Proceeds from the Jay Walk campaign will provide scholarships for students who have overcome significant obstacles or adversities en route to their degrees. The first recipients of the Jay Walk scholarships were Sadari Hudson, a Criminal Justice major, and Mehdi Mahraoui, a BA/MA student in Public Administration.

Featuring wide lawns, trees, benches, a vegetable garden and an expansive lawn connecting John Jay's two buildings, the Jay Walk is a unique component of the College's recent expansion. An oversized flight of outside stairs mirrors the Cascade inside the concourse, where students can sit and enjoy their surroundings in an amphitheater-like setting.

Visit <https://johnjay.jjay.cuny.edu/jaywalk> for more information on the Jay Walk campaign.

THE ANYA AND ANDREW SHIVA ART GALLERY IS NAMED IN HONOR OF THE LARGEST DONATION IN THE COLLEGE'S HISTORY

In a historic milestone for John Jay, alumnus and Adjunct Professor Dr. Andrew Shiva donated an extraordinary $5-million gift to the College, the largest donation in its nearly 50-year history. In recognition of this gift, the new building's 4,050-square-foot exhibition gallery has been named the Anya and Andrew Shiva Gallery.

Dr. and Mrs. Shiva's transformative gift will be used to fund research grants for students and faculty of John Jay's PhD program in Forensic Psychology, assessment and psychotherapy training for students, and new research initiatives that would not be possible without this unprecedented contribution.

Dr. Shiva said his inspiration for giving so generously to his alma mater began with the rich, powerful relationships with and encouragement he received from John Jay faculty as a student. Those relationships would continue and grow as Dr. Shiva went on to become chief psychologist of the Division of Forensic Psychiatry at NYU/Bellevue Hospital Center, and an active and visionary member of John Jay's graduate faculty in forensic psychology.

In a reception dedicating the Anya and Andrew Shiva Gallery, President Jeremy Travis conveyed his deep gratitude to the Shivas for their tremendous generosity and dedication to John Jay.

"We stand here today in recognition of the arts and what Andrew has given to the psychology department and the eminence of that program. We are also recognizing an act of generosity in naming this art gallery," said President Travis.

"I've been asked more than once, 'Why an art gallery?' Community is my first answer," said Dr. Shiva. "An art gallery provides our students with exposure to art, creativity, expression, imagination and inspiration. The second answer has to do with the psychological aspect of art as an expression of the inner self. When you combine a psychological approach to interpreting art with topics related to crime and justice, there is a real opportunity to see, through the work in front of you, a glimpse of the artist's soul."

Dr. Shiva is also an avid collector of antique United States paper currency, and he founded the National Currency Foundation in the fall of 2011 to promote the history behind paper money and virtual exposure to the notes themselves. As a Research Associate for the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History, Dr. Shiva has begun digitizing and cataloging the paper currency in the National Numismatic Collection at the Smithsonian for their archives and as a teaching tool for the general public.

After earning a BA/MA in Forensic Psychology in 1997, Dr. Shiva went on to earn a doctorate in Clinical Psychology from Columbia University. Always passionate about higher education and the mental health field, Dr. Shiva has been a strong supporter of the College as a member of the doctoral faculty and as a trustee of the John Jay College Foundation.

PINKERTON FELLOWSHIP INITIATIVE MAKING A DIFFERENCE

The Pinkerton Foundation has demonstrated strong confidence in John Jay and its students by making its largest grant ever to a college and its first grant to support a fellowship program to John Jay. Named the “Pinkerton Fellowship Initiative,” the $475,068 project will provide opportunities for promising students to assume positions of responsibility in the youth-service field.

The initiative consists of two tracks, the Pinkerton Community Fellows and the Pinkerton Graduate Research Fellows, providing unique learning and service opportunities for up to 10 juniors and seniors and four graduate students. Pinkerton Fellows engage in year-long placements with a host organization from the nonprofit sector, and receive financial support in the form of wages, stipends and transportation allowances. Graduate Research Fellows work with outside agencies under the auspices of the John Jay Research and Evaluation Center.

The 2012-2013 host organizations include: Abraham House; the Center for Court Innovation; the Center for Alternative Sentencing and Employment Services; the Children’s Aid Society; the DOME Project; Exalt Youth; Good Shepherd Services; Hour Children, and the Osborne Association.

“Pinkerton Fellowships provide students with the opportunity to connect their academic learning with professional experience,” said Ann Jacobs, Director of the Prisoner Reentry Institute, which oversees the Pinkerton Community Fellows component. “As a result, they are more employable, more promotable, and more likely to contribute in big ways earlier in their lives.”

Rick Smith, the President of the Pinkerton Foundation, added: “We are delighted that the Pinkerton Fellows Initiative at John Jay will both provide direct, hands-on assistance to many of our community-based grantees and offer a new generation of students and young researchers valuable experience in the field.”

RUDIN AND RESEARCH GO HAND-IN-HAND

Susan and Jack Rudin have a well established reputation as philanthropic citizens of New York, and the beneficiaries of that generosity include John Jay, where a $500,000 gift from the Rudins and the May and Samuel Rudin Family Foundation is supporting a fellowship program under the aegis of the John Jay Research and Evaluation Center, as well as a program of research partnerships with New York justice agencies.

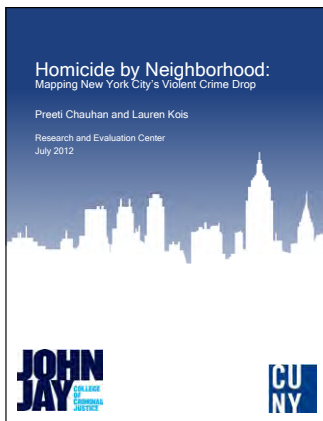

“These are strategic investments by the Rudins, with whom the center has had a relationship for several years,” said Dr. Jeffrey Butts, the REC’s director.

The Rudin Fellows in Applied Justice Research are graduate students who work in conjunction with nonprofit community-based organizations in the New York City youth justice sector. The Fellows receive guidance and training in applied evaluation skills from John Jay faculty and staff, and then apply these skills to help support and develop the analytical capacities of participating agencies.

The Rudin Research Partnership program allows REC staff to collaborate on research projects with John Jay faculty and New York city and state justice organizations. “The goal is to help agencies that don’t have the capability to evaluate their own programs,” said Butts.

JUSTICE REPORTING GETS BOOST FROM TOW FOUNDATION

The Tow Foundation takes a programmatic interest in media, juvenile justice, higher education and First Amendment issues – evidence of which was amply displayed in the foundation’s $100,000 grant to support the April 2012 symposium “Kids Behind Bars: Where’s the Justice in America’s Juvenile Justice System?”

Organized by John Jay’s Center on Media, Crime and Justice, the symposium brought together 31 journalists from around the nation and some of the country’s most prominent juvenile justice practitioners, scholars and advocates. Over the course of the two-day gathering, participants explored current sentencing and detention practices, the impact of race, treatment of mental health and substance abuse, and more.

Cara Tabachnick, the center’s deputy director, explained that the 31 journalists were chosen as Reporting Fellows, with projects either planned or in the works.

With Tow’s support, the center is also creating an online “juvenile justice news network” for participating journalists, with discussions, chats and other resources to assist them in following trends and new research in this area. “Fellows have to commit to going out and producing stories,” she said. “Anytime you can get journalists to write about an otherwise uncovered subject, it’s a plus.”

The center hopes to provide a “one-stop shopping” resource for the Reporting Fellows, Tabachnick said. “The fellows have really produced a lot of good journalism,” she said, “and have shown a high level of enthusiasm for continuing to produce.”

The Tow Foundation would seem to agree, and likes what it has seen thus far – in September, a $50,000 extension in foundation support was provided to the center.

ROCKEFELLER FUND ‘LEAP OF FAITH’ HELPS PRISONER REENTRY

John Jay’s Prison-to-College Pipeline program, which is helping to redefine prisoner reentry, owes its existence in part to a “leap of faith” on the part of the David Rockefeller Fund, which has provided two two-year grants to help get the initiative up and running.

The P2CP program, as it is known, brings together students from the John Jay campus and men incarcerated at the upstate Otisville Correctional Facility for a monthly series of learning exchanges at the prison. The inmates, who are all within two to five years of release, also participate in traditional college classes and are guaranteed admission to the City University upon release if they meet certain basic qualifying criteria.

“They’re discerning,” Ann Jacobs, executive director of the Prisoner Reentry Institute, said of the David Rockefeller Fund and its executive director, Marnie Pillsbury, and director of programs, Marianna Schaffer. “They know that higher education is one of the best investments you can make when it comes to corrections.”

The Fund provided $100,000 over two years from 2010-2011, which Jacobs said covered the planning and start-up phase and the first year of operation. The funding was renewed for an additional two years in 2012.

“They saw the opportunity here,” said Jacobs. “This is a very substantial commitment on the part of the David Rockefeller Fund.”

Jacobs added that Fund officials stay very involved with the P2CP, visiting Otisville prison, attending Prisoner Reentry Institute events and networking with other potential donors.

MIRANTES INVEST IN SOCIAL JUSTICE

A generous $250,000 gift from the Vice Chairman of the John Jay College Foundation Board of Trustees and his wife will help support the John Jay Vera Fellows Program, which provides an opportunity for students to gain critical experience as interns at social justice organizations.

In recognition of the gift, the College has named the new rooftop terrace the Elizabeth and Arthur J. Mirante II Faculty Dining Terrace.

Mirante, is a former CEO of Cushman & Wakefield, the commercial real estate firm. In 2012 he became a Principal and Tri-State President of Avison Young, Canada's largest independently-owned real estate services firm.

The Mirantes are staunch, longtime financial supporters of the John Jay Vera Fellows Program, now in its fifth year. Support for the program makes it possible for outstanding students who have demonstrated a commitment to social justice and public service to receive stipends during their internships.

Arthur Mirante will be the honoree at the College's 2013 fundraising gala.

LOYAL DONORS HELP JOHN JAY VERA FELLOWS MAKE AN IMPACT

From Harlem to Brooklyn, even at the state Capitol, John Jay Vera Fellows are making an impact. As interns in social justice organizations, John Jay students are gaining valuable experience and contributing to the front-line work of community-based organizations.

One recent John Jay Vera Fellow interned with the Neighborhood Defender Service, which provides free legal representation and social services to residents of upper Harlem. During the internship she shadowed attorneys and had a front seat into the world of lawyering.

Through the John Jay Vera Fellows Program, 10 students each year have an opportunity to intern with front-line criminal justice agencies. The Fellows attend weekly seminars that include scholarly reading and discussion, guest lectures and site visits. They also receive a stipend of $1,500 per semester.

Many Fellows have gone on to full-time employment at their internship sites or have used their experience to help them obtain related positions at other nonprofits. One Fellow who was hired by her internship agency has since been promoted twice and now serves as an agency mentor to a John Jay Vera Fellow.

The reactions of students to the John Jay Vera Fellowship have been uniformly positive. "Interning with a Vera agency has completely changed my perspective on what my future could be," said one. "The Vera Fellowship is a truly one-of-a-kind, hands-on experience that helped me define who I am and what I would like to do in life, and gave me the confidence that I can achieve that."

The program, coordinated by Professor Abby Stein of John Jay's Interdisciplinary Studies Program, is made possible by the generous support of loyal donors, including former New York City Corporation Counsel Frederick A.O. Schwarz Jr.; former Goldman Sachs Senior Director Richard Menschel and his wife, Ronay; Jeffrey Gural, chairman of Newmark Grubb Knight Frank; Ron L. Moelis, CEO and chairman of L&M Development Partners Inc., and Herbert Sturz, former New York City Deputy Mayor and the founding Director of the Vera Institute of Justice.

THEN, NOW AND ALWAYS, STUDENTS MATTER TO JIM AND RUBIE MALONE

Through all of the many positions Drs. James and Rubie Malone have held in their long careers at John Jay – as faculty members, counselors, deans and College executives – students have always occupied a special place in their hearts. The Malones recently affirmed that affection with a $100,000 pledge to the College to support student scholarships. In recognition, the College on December 11 dedicated the Drs. Rubie and James Malone Student Government Conference Room in the new building.

The conference room is the site of Student Council meetings as well as workshops, training sessions and other events.

Jim, as he is known schoolwide, has been member of the John Jay community since 1970, and his long service includes 11 years as Dean of Students. In that role, he helped create the student government charter that is still in force today. Rubie, his wife of 49 years, joined John Jay in 1978, and like her husband began in the Search for Education, Elevation and Knowledge (SEEK) program. Her John Jay career has similarly been marked by extensive involvement in student activities, as faculty advisor, counselor and mentor.

Both are trained as teachers and social workers, although the recognition of their talents ultimately lifted them to other assignments, Jim as the College's first Vice President for Administrative Affairs, and Rubie as Assistant Vice President for Strategic Planning and Outcomes Assessment.

The Malones' pledge reflects guiding precepts that have helped shape their lives. Jim professes a strong belief in "reaching back" and helping others to attain their highest potential. He often says, "If I can help somebody as I pass this way, then my living has not been in vain." Rubie, ever mindful of the guidance and encouragement she has received from family, teachers and others, said she continues to live by the motto of her undergraduate alma mater: "Culture for Service."

REMEMBERING A VISIONARY

George Friedman, a beloved member of the John Jay College Foundation Board of Trustees, died suddenly last year. "George was an inspiring, devoted, energetic and tireless advocate for the mission of John Jay College," remembers President Jeremy Travis. "Through his creative contributions, he shaped the future of the College," added John Jay Board Chair Jules Kroll. "He always pushed us to be creative and bold," added President Travis. "We miss him."

Friedman was the genius behind developing and marketing perfumes for some of the best known designers in the world, including Ralph Lauren, Paloma Picasso and Gloria Vanderbilt. His entrepreneurial vision changed the fragrance landscape and his impact in the cosmetic industry was legendary.

Friedman's innovative spirit and deep expertise in marketing and advertising were a tremendous boon to John Jay. His input was pivotal in moving John Jay forward with a new branding initiative and logo, which were created by fellow board member Alan Siegel of Siegelvision.

Friedman served with distinction on numerous boards in the not-for-profit sector and was chairman of the I Have a Dream Foundation, through which he sponsored a program that enabled inner-city children to attend college.

John Jay is privileged to continue to work with George's wife, Pam Bernstein Friedman, who donated her husband's wardrobe to continue her support of John Jay's Career Services Clothing Closet Program. In addition, a scholarship fund has been established in Friedman's name. Those who wish to contribute should visit www.jjay.cuny.edu/give.

CAMPAIGN CLOSE-UP

Jayne Rosengarten, Vice President of Marketing and Development provides a closer look at The Campaign for the Future of Justice.

Inspired to Give: What is the vision for The Campaign for the Future of Justice?

Vice President Rosengarten: The Campaign for the Future of Justice provides alumni and friends of John Jay a unique opportunity to join the College's efforts to forge new and remarkable initiatives that further the impact of the College's world-class scholarship and research.

Inspired to Give: When did the Campaign begin and how much has been raised?

Vice President Rosengarten: The Campaign for the Future of Justice began in 2005 with an established goal of raising $50 million by the College's 50th anniversary, which will take place in the 2014/2015 academic year. The Campaign has had an overwhelming response from alumni and friends and to date has raised over $42 million.

Inspired to Give: What do the Campaign contributions support?

Vice President Rosengarten: The funds raised will support student success through scholarships, enriched interdisciplinary programs and paid internships. Contributions also support innovative faculty research and will help to recruit and retain eminent scholars, scientists, artists and professionals. The funds will also enhance our students' learning environment by enabling the College to further expand its facilities and resources. Donors work with the President and John Jay's development team to determine their area of interest and match it with the needs of the College.

Inspired to Give: How has the new building impacted the College's fundraising efforts?

Vice President Rosengarten: The College's new bold 13-story vertical campus is the architectural embodiment of the College's transformation as a world leader in Educating for Justice. Towering above 11th Avenue, it provides a timely opportunity to rally philanthropic support. Since John Jay did not need to raise funds for the construction of the building, donors have the unique opportunity to name a space and designate the funds to an area of need at the College.

Inspired to Give: Why does John Jay need philanthropic funds if the College is funded by the State?

Vice President Rosengarten: Dramatic changes have occurred in government funding for higher education. State support for publicly funded institutions has dwindled and growth in federal support for financial aid and research has also been significantly reduced. It is critical that as a publicly funded institution, we leverage private donations to ensure that our students continue to receive the quality education that they deserve and that John Jay remains competitive and on the cutting edge.

Inspired to Give: This publication features many generous donors; do smaller gifts count in the Campaign?

Vice President Rosengarten: Each and every gift is meaningful. We are grateful to all of our donors, whether it is a gift made today or a future bequest. Every dollar counts and supports student success, enriched programs, faculty research and an enhanced learning environment. Alumni participation rates, in particular, are universally regarded as the best way to measure alumni satisfaction with their alma mater; it is one of the key metrics used to determine national rankings and the financial support received from foundations. It is not the dollar amount of each gift that counts; it is the percentage of alumni that give at any level. A gift of $25 is just as important as a gift of $2,500 when it comes to alumni participation.

THANK YOU FROM CHAIR JULES KROLL

For nearly 50 years, John Jay College of Criminal Justice has been providing outstanding educational opportunities to students from all walks of life and every part of the globe. Your support and commitment allow these future “fierce advocates for justice” to continue to reap the considerable benefits of a John Jay education. Thank you, alumni, friends and supporters.

These are exciting times at John Jay, as the College undergoes a dramatic transformation and expansion, with new cutting-edge academic programs, highly motivated new faculty and students and, of course, the spectacular new addition to the West Side campus. It is inspiring to see the contributions that our graduates and our faculty make on the front lines of justice in all its myriad forms, and the recently launched Campaign for the Future of Justice is an important way of assuring that future generations will have an opportunity to make similar impacts.

It is my honor and privilege to serve as chairman of the foundation, and I salute each and every one of you for your willingness to lead by example, Your steadfast and generous support serves to inspire others to do likewise, and makes it possible for John Jay to maintain and build its international reputation in Educating for Justice well into the 21st century.
