The College Now Program is a comprehensive collaborative initiative of the City University of New York and the New York City Board of Education. Through the active involvement of the colleges within the University, it promotes and supports high standards of academic achievement for New York City public high school students. The general goals of John Jay College of Criminal Justice College Now program are to:

- enhance the effect of high school instruction in basic skills;
- introduce students to college life and to prepare students for changes in lifestyle; and
- develop the personal values necessary to survive and to succeed in college.

The College Now Program offers students who are skills certified an opportunity to participate in college level courses and aims to increase preparation for college enrollment. Students are limited to registering for one 3-credit college course per semester.

Participating students can earn college credit in two ways: In COHORT Courses students attend college level classes comprised of students from various NYC public high schools. In WAIVER Courses students are enrolled in courses with John Jay college students.

For students who are not skills certified and are ineligible for enrollment in a 3-credit course, they have the opportunity to enroll in a college preparatory course and/or workshop.

Students enrolled in college-level courses will be issued a College Now ID card and will be able to use the library and microcomputer labs.

The schedule for College Now courses is slightly modified from the general college schedule. College Now courses start later than regular college classes, but meet for longer hours. College Now students are required to make a serious commitment to attend classes and complete all assignments.

John Jay’s College Now Program also works closely with partnership high schools to design programs that enable students to develop their academic and personal potential. Participating high schools may offer college credit and/or high school courses at their respective campuses.

By taking college credit courses students save money and earn college credit while attending high school. Participate in the College Now Program and experience the richness of college.
